

The why & language

Developmentally able to comprehend more complex information thus you can provide more accurate information such as what is happening in their body which requires a port and port access

Provide information to your teen as equal decision makers

Emphasize the need, severity, how important this is. The port access is not the choice but there are other choices which can be available

Practice

Supporting the teen in identifying what works for them - give them a voice

Not being treated like a child

Being trusted; being asked for input

Possibly researching other teen's input on the experience, or the need for the port access (youtube, peer support, community)

Providing Warning

Being honest - looping them in as soon as it is scheduled, and informing them on what the schedule will be and why

- Need port accessed once a month, every two weeks, etc.

Support in autonomy and allowing them some responsibility by encouraging to add the appointments to their calendar along with other school work and activities

COPING PLAN

Appropriate Choices

Provide opportunity for control as well as autonomy and independence when it is time for the appointment:

- preference for a parent/caregiver to be in the room or preference to be alone
- checking in about specific coping tools or choices they feel will be best for this appointment
- check if preference for information throughout (what step of procedure are they on) or preference for no information

Positions for Comfort

Can be sitting propped next to parent or sitting alone on bed. If sitting alone ensure body is in comfortable, relaxed position - leaning against back of chair or bed, body propped up comfortably, distraction items easily propped or accessible

Distraction

Deep breathing

Watching something on iPad or phone

Holding someones' hand/stress ball

Buzzy or light scratching above site

Engaging in conversation
